Democratic National Convention The tone adopted by some of our Dem ocratic contemporaries about the pro-ceedings at Charleston, and individual delegates, is not calculated to restore hurmony to he party or to secure a just appreciation of the facts. It is an assumption that the Demeratic voters of the country will not sanction, that any individual's wishes are of mor importance than the principles and the success of the National Democracy. Truth and Justice and Wisdom and Patriotism are not a monopoly; these virtues are likely to exist where no boast is made of their possession as where self-conceit and arragance claim them exclusively. but notice the many outdoor improvements which have been made since the new proprie tors have taken possession. In fact the whole place had, like the birds, trees and flowers put on a new and bright appearance. On entering the office we found everything arranged in the most elegant and systematic manner. We found Mr. Benbury behind the counter perfectly at home, attending to the wishes of his visitors in the most prompt and gentlemanly manner and issuing his orders in a quiet, but positive tone, (quite in contrast with the usual pomposity of landlords) while ev-fashionable style, while in the extensive dining saloon everything presented an appearance of newness and neatness. The tables were arranged according to the most approved method, while the eatables to be found thereon were of the most unexceptionable character. We have visited Cooper's Well more or less for several years past, but the fare under the administration of Messrs Benbury & Co., is decidedly superior to any of which we have ever partaken at that fashionable resort .--Then the servants are both numerous and attentive. The dining room is under the general supervision of Mr. Montgomery, and right will does he discharge his duties. The bedrooms, too, have all been elegantly furnished and are kept in good order. In a word, the whole place has been repaired and fitted up regardless of expense or trouble; and no efforts will be spared to make the Wells the most attractive Summer resort in the South

We certainly think the princely liberality and untiring energy of the proprietors should meet with encour gement at the hands of the people of this and adjacent States. We attended the opening Ball given on ras not as large as we expected, yet the num ber was sufficient to make it agreeable. The dancing was continued till supper was announced, when we sat down to the finest sup-
